Dear Adrian and Adrian.

We have tweaked a bit more the wording but essentially saying the same thing as the wording we sent you. We just put the different constructions in a table format.

And we have to remove reference to the Kingspan's document because otherwise it will misleadingly mean endorsement by the certificate and NHBC of constructions that have not been tested.

We also removed reference to class 0 as BS EN takes precedence. We do that for all our certificates.

We have to expedite this exercise so you will be receiving an amended draft for your comment/approval and NHBC will be receiving the same amended draft for approval/tweaking if needed.

Either by this afternoon or tomorrow.

Hopefully this will resolved quickly.

Thank you for your patience.

Kindly
Gayetree

Dear Gayetree

Thank you for your swift response to the meeting with NHBC, unfortunately I was out of the office yesterday and will be again today, however I have asked Adrian Brazier our Technical Projects Manager to compare the recommended amendments, in some detail, to the recently issued certificate.

However, after a very quick glance there are two things which occur to us:

- Firstly, it appears from your final sentence, that the NHBC are now not proposing to remove their note on acceptance, (assuming we agree to amendments presumably) ?
- Secondly, rather than remove the class O reference all together, could we not just add the EN fire classification alongside, they are both accurate statements ?

We plan come back to you on 18th with our final comments, but would appreciate your view on above points in the meantime.

Your efforts on this subject are much appreciated.

Regards

Subject: update on k15 meeting with NHBC - wording to be amended in the certificate 14/5134 PS 7

Importance: High

Dear Adrian

Good afternoon, I can understand you are eager for an update on our meeting with NHBC.

NHBC wants the EN fire classification referred to as opposed to saying low risk and class 0. Actually this is fair because I should have asked for the fire classification of the product during the reissue.

They also want reference to the actual construction related fire report to BR135 referenced, and a few bits and pieces in the fire section.

I understand where they are coming as it is very easily misled on site if people don't actually install in accordance to how it was tested.

So please kindly see attached amended wording and would appreciate your agreement/comment.

We will need to amend the cert, which we will do free of charge by end of this week 20.11.2015.

If you are happy with the proposed, then we will amend and send to NHBC for confirmation and/or tweaked.

AP/52 []

Please would you kindly expedite this exercise as we want the certificate to keep the NHBC's approval.

Thank you
Kindly
Gayetree
